“Forms of Forgetting”

Wednesday 29 April | 6-8 pm | IG 411

Remembering and forgetting are not necessarily polar opposites; more often than not they are mutually dependent and linked to each other in a dynamic relation. Though it may seem counter-intuitive that forgetting can be willfully achieved through intentional actions, I will show that it is an important factor in social dynamics, political processes and cultural practices. The lecture will analyze various form and functions of forgetting in their socio-cultural contexts. It will also ask the question whether the Internet age has introduced a new media situation that has radically changed the ecology of remembering and forgetting.

This lecture will be followed by a Memory Studies Master Class with Aleida Assmann on Thursday 30 April | 10-12 am | IG 1.414
