

Decolonial Memorialisation & Intersectional Sovereignty Incarceration Camps of the Pacific War

Thursday | May 2, 2024 | 15⁰⁰–18⁰⁰ | Goethe University
Frankfurt | Campus Westend | Casino Building | Room 1.811

15⁰⁰ Lecture

Anoma Pieris Professor of Architecture at the Melbourne School of Design & member of TraCe's Scientific Advisory Board

*In this lecture, Anoma Pieris discusses the design, intellectual framing for and methodological approach to her most recent publication, The Architecture of Confinement: Incarceration Camps of the Pacific War (Cambridge University Press 2022), co-authored with Japanese-American scholar Lynne Horiuchi. The book takes the arc of the Pacific Basin and incarceration environment heritage and memory as a framework for understanding how settler societies impacted by war negotiated changing attitudes to citizenship. Presenting the Pacific theatre of World War II as a site of imperial border conflict between Britain, its allies and Japan, the research covers memorial sites in North America, Asia and Australia.*

17⁰⁰ Reception

18⁰⁰ Following, a round table on "Rethinking Cosmopolitan

Memories in Postcolonial Contexts" takes place at the same location
